Schools Back Off Legal Exposure and Expel Groomers

by Linda Harvey

Do most parents understand that the word “inclusive” in schools means that kids will be taught how to have “safe” anal sex?

Pardon me if I've shocked you, but that's the bottom line, so to speak, of the drumbeat for so-called “LGBTQ inclusive” sex ed. Essentially, that topic is what brings the rainbow community on board and eliminates the leftist paranoia about too much binary talk (male/female distinctions, marriage, etc.).

So SIECUS is raising money in May to push “LGBTQ inclusive Sex Ed for All,” as if some students have routinely been excluded.

The Trevor Project is the go-to solution many uninformed school districts will include as a resource somewhere in their material to children, whether in sex ed class or elsewhere. In fact, Trevor appears on the list of “trusted resources” of a 7th grade gender lesson in the Advocates for Youth curriculum, Rights, Respect and Responsibility.

Highlights for Children Goes Queer: Families Betrayed Again

by Linda Harvey

Just in time for sinful “pride” month, we learn that another corporation bites the poisonous rainbow dust. Highlights for Children, which many of us fondly remember for its hidden puzzles in innocent kids’ magazines, has advanced well down the road of fearlessly producing tools for grooming.

The foundation blog just posted a jaw-dropping article, 10 Scary Books for Queer Teens to Feel Empowered Reading. The author of this post is Rob Costello, author of We Mostly Come Out At Night: 15 Queer Tales of Monsters, Angels & Other Creatures. Here's his truth-compromising analysis:

"...LGBTQIA+ kids feel under siege by bigoted politicians, school boards, and church leaders."
